Portfolio Update

The portfolio delivered a return of 0.54% during the month, compared with the MSCI All Country World ex-Australia Index (the Benchmark) return of 1.51%. The portfolio has delivered returns in excess of the benchmark over six months, three years and since inception.

Global equity markets were higher in December, completing a third consecutive year of double-digit positive returns. Overall, for the calendar year, the portfolio achieved a return of 20.73%.

December saw a continuation of the long-running arm wrestle between the positive forces of expansionary fiscal and monetary policy plus vaccine rollouts, versus the negative impact of lockdowns on economic activity and inflation. Fears over the highly infectious COVID-19 Omicron variant, which first surfaced in November, gave way to relief when it was recognised as being much less virulent than its predecessors. The other major newsworthy event in the month was the US Federal Reserve giving notice of a sooner-than-expected reduction in its bond purchasing programme, thus paving the way for higher interest rates in 2022. Other central banks also signalled a tightening in policy with the Bank of England increasing rates by 0.15% to 0.25%.

At a regional level, developed markets outperformed emerging markets, with the latter weighed down by China's continuing efforts to manage its property and debt problems. In terms of sectors, gains were widespread with Utilities and Consumer Staples leading the way. At a factor level, value and momentum factors were among the stronger performers.

From a sector allocation perspective, the portfolio's zero exposure to Utilities and Real Estate and overweight position to Consumer Discretionary stocks was a drag on performance in December. The largest positive sector-based contribution to the portfolio came from the overweight exposure to Health Care. Stock selection detracted from performance in December.

The portfolio's Health Care exposure includes Massachusetts-based Repligen Corporation, a 'picks-and-shovel' play on bioprocessing. Repligen makes critical instruments and consumables that are used in key parts of the drug manufacturing processes of pharmaceutical companies. Their economic moat is twofold: high-switching costs and deep industry know-how. Repligen uses this strong position to expand its moat through the thoughtful acquisition of adjacent technologies. The business is further supported by the tailwinds of growing demand for biologics and expanding biomanufacturing capacity.

Looking ahead to 2022 there is, as always, plenty of uncertainty. However, regardless of what the year brings from a macroeconomic or markets perspective, the WCM team will remain focused on businesses that are continuing to grow their competitive advantages. These are the companies most likely to deliver compelling returns in the long run.
